At a glance

ACTION	WHERE	WHAT IT MAKES
Mass Duplicate Class	Class page, Actions menu	One new class per date of a repeat rule, each with all of the class's sub-products on that date
Mass Duplicate	Class sub-product page, Actions menu	One new sub-product of the same class per date, at the same time and location
Duplicate Class	Class sub-product page, Actions menu	One copy of the sub-product under a new SKU you choose
Duplicate Sub-product	Sub-product page of any other product type, Actions menu	One copy of the sub-product under a new SKU you choose

Repeat rules

- Repeat every 1 to 99 days, weeks or months.
- Weekly rules repeat on any set of weekdays, Sunday to Saturday.
- Monthly rules repeat on dates of the month (for example the 13th and the 22nd) or on weekdays of the month (for example the fourth Thursday and the last Friday), never a mix of the two.
- Any number of monthly rows, added with Add another date or Add another weekday and removed with the x beside each row.
- A date the month does not have, such as the 31st in April, falls on the month's last day.
- Two rows that land on the same date in a month make one class, not two.
- Periods are counted the way a calendar counts them: "every 2 weeks on Sunday" after a Sunday class lands two weeks later.

Safe by design

- Every series must end: after a number of classes, or on an end date. There is no "never".
- New dates always fall after the existing ones: after the latest date among the class's sub-products, or after the sub-product's own date.
- No date is ever in the past. When the source's date has passed, the series starts today.
- Start-time clashes are shown before anything is created, with Go Back and Create Anyway.
- All the classes of one run are created together or not at all.
- A live "?" tooltip spells out the rule in plain words while you set it up, including when it starts and how many classes it will make.

What every copy gets

- A new SKU, `<SKU>-YYYYMMDD` for mass duplicates, shortened to fit 32 characters and stepped to `-2`, `-3` when taken.
- The source's time and location, and its total seats or stock.
- Reserved seats or reserved stock set to 0.
- Prices, SKU breakdown, related sub-products and add-ons, copied as they are.
- For a multi-session class, every session moved by the same number of days, times kept, and the availability cutoff on the same session.

Also in this release

- Class sub-products no longer show the Reference Prices card; their system price levels are still saved.
- On class sub-products the Actions menu says Duplicate Class rather than Duplicate Sub-product.
